Loss of revenue main issue for Legislature

Utah Legislature to open Monday with concern over state budget

By MEAGAN ANDERSON

Members of the Utah Legislature will be busy when they return to business Monday.

"We have a twofold mission (in the legislature)," said Sen. Allen, D-Salt Lake, senate minority whip. "First we must, change and make laws to fit a changing society. We work hard to make laws balancing freedom and personal liberty."

The second mission of the legislature is to manage the state budget, Allen said.

Representatives and senators from across the state who survived November elections now face the heated issues confronting them in the new legislative session.

"The big challenge (this session) will be the declining budget," said Rep. Becky Lockhart, R-Orem, vice chairman of the executive appropriations committee for the Utah House of Representatives. "It will be hard. There is no extra money available."

Education, Medicare funding, health and human services, the courts and public safety are among the many areas in which that have declining revenue and need to be looked at closely, Lockhart said.

Allen said the state is experiencing revenue shortfalls because of a declining economy.

"We have to pay the bills," he said. "Everything will seem secondary because of the budget."

Legislatures will also have to make decisions about legalizing a controversial abortion method, taxing radioactive waste being transported through Utah and trying to solve the education problems plaguing the state.

The legislative session begins Jan. 20 and goes through the evening of March 5.

During this time, the legislature operates what is called an open legislative process, where all committee action on bills and amendments is conducted in open session, giving the public the opportunity to attend committee meetings and House and Senate floor sessions.

Utah operates under a citizen legislature rather than a part-time legislature. Most legislators have occupations outside the legislature when it is not in session.

"We have a strength you don't find in other states that have professional politicians," said Lockhart, who is in her fourth year of serving in the House. "We are part-time politicians. We are also stay-at-home moms, lawyers, farmers and teachers."

Professional politicians often lose touch with constituents and lose their real world perspective, but Utah politicians live in the real world everyday, Lockhart said.

Allen said one downfall of being a member of a citizen legislature is time away from personal and professional commitments.

"My personal and professional life suffers," he said. "My company suffers, and I have talked to many people who lose money from being a legislator."

These demands are simply part of the job of a legislature and are part of community service, Allen said.

Close contact with the community and professional involvement allow legislatures to get close to personal issues.

"Everyone gets their niche, has their expertise and gets involved in a certain area," said Lockhart, who is a BYU graduate of the nursing program. "My interest is in health care, and a lot of my legislation goes toward that area."

Rep. David Cox, R-Lehi, is like Lockhart and many other legislature members. He also has a close crossover between his professional and political careers.

A public school teacher for more than 22 years, Cox is passionate about legislation concerning education, and is working on two pieces of education legislation.

2 killed in plane crash

A firefighter watches a smoking plane Thursday, after extinguishing the flames. Both the pilot, Ed Strauchen, and the copilot were killed.

Authorities investigating cause of plane crash in Midway

By CHRISTINE PATTERSON

MIDWAY — The pilots of a Russian Yakovlev biplane muttered a faint "Mayday" into their radio as their aircraft took a nose-dive, crashing in a field on Main Street in Midway.

Ed Strauchen, an ex-navy pilot, and his unnamed copilot both died on impact Thursday at noon.

Strauchen was one of the four owners of the antique acrobatic "Yak," which was flown in World War II.

In 1983, the Yak owners completely refurbished the plane and then, according to aviation regulation, re-registered it as new.

The plane was doing acrobatics when the crash occurred, according to Lynn Adams, mayor of Heber City.

"I thought it was somebody hot-dogging and flying too low," said Jerry Owens of Midway, who saw the plane Thursday. "Then I thought, no, this plane's going to crash."

Rumors circulated at the site that an explosion had occurred in the air before the crash, but those reports remain unconfirmed.

Investigators from the FAA are still trying to determine the cause of the accident, but eyewitnesses said there was no sign of engine trouble.

"The airplane took a nose dive straight into the earth. The engine didn't stall or anything," Owens said.

The plane was a yellow, fixed-wing, high-performance, single-engine plane, according to the Wasatch County Sheriff's office.

The name of the second victim won't be released until the family has been notified, according to airport personnel.

The plane crashed less than 200 feet from a nearby group of houses. However, there was no damage to buildings and no people were hurt.

The Yak took off from the Heber Airplane Museum founded by Strauchen, which is located next to the airport.

Emergency personnel investigate the remains of the plane to find the cause of the crash.

Strauchen, described him as a good man and an experienced, competent pilot.

Airport personnel described the Yak as a safe aircraft that was flown often for sightseeing.

The museum has one remaining Yak, according to airport personnel.

KBYU cancels program addressing homosexuality

By CASI MARIE

A presentation on homosexuality, which was to be aired Wednesday night on BYU cable and on KBYU in February, has been canceled.

"KBYU made the decision not to carry the program. We felt it might be an oversimplification of a complex issue," said Jim Bell, KBYU's marketing director.

The Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD) was pleased the broadcast was canceled. Monica Taher, a media manager for GLAAD, said the presentation was one-sided and gave information that would harm rather than help.

"Any TV station... needs to have both sides of the story," Taher said.

On the other hand, the presenter, Jeff Robinson said the program could have helped many people.

"I'm disappointed at the cancellation of this broadcast," he said. "I had hoped that it would help many young people struggling with the issue of same sex attraction as well as increasing the understanding of their families and others who care about them."

Robinson said the reasons for the cancellation were baffling to him since the presentation was well received at the time of production. Yet, he said that it is up to the university whether to run the program or not.

"I respect the university's right and responsibility to make decisions regarding what they will or will not broadcast," he said.

Robinson, a marriage and family counselor in Orem whose caseload is approximately 90 percent homosexual men, tackled in the presentation what works and what doesn't when men battle with homosexuality. His lecture was presented Oct. 4 in a BYU conference and workshop called Families Under Fire.

In his presentation Robinson gave guidelines for what he has seen work with his clients, including not overemphasizing their problems.

BYU celebrates Martin Luther King, Jr. Day with Walk of Life

By EMILIE CASSAN

BYU will join with the rest of the nation Monday in celebrating the achievements and contributions of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. during its annual Walk of Life.

The Walk of Life is a program established more than 10 years ago at BYU as a way to pay tribute to the advances made by King to the Civil Rights Movement.

"It's in commemoration of Dr. King and his ideas of bringing about peace and unity," said Candice Knox, a senior at Jackson, Tenn., majoring in theater studies. "It's a coming together of all different kinds of people."

Quiana Gough, a sophomore from Baltimore, Md., majoring in nursing, is one of the coordinators of Black History

Month activities at BYU, which takes place in February. Gough organized this year's Walk of Life.

"My main goal is for it to be enjoyed, and that people learn from it," Gough said.

The Walk of Life, which will be Monday at 5:30 p.m., will begin with a candle-lighting ceremony at the Carillon Bell Tower. From the Bell Tower, the candlelit chain will move its way down to the WSC Terrace.

Once there, the main program, a musical fireside, will begin.

A choir made up of members of the Black Student Union will sing.

Abe Mills of Jericho Road will recite the first half of King's famous "I Have a Dream" speech. The second half will be a video presentation of King giving the speech.

Other members of the Black Student Union will present special musical numbers and one of King's sermons titled "Desegregation and the Future."

Gough said she hopes those who will come learn about King's views, his desire for unity for mankind and why he was honored out of all the various people who have contributed to the Civil Rights Movement.

"He was a very strong man to handle what he did," she said. "He endured persecution, physical and mental abuse and stayed strong."

Thom Reed, a first-year MBA student from Normal, Ill., said it is good to see there is a day in King's honor and to see it means something here at BYU.

"In a way, it honors the Black community in general," Reed said. "As an African-American, it's comforting to know that."

Gough said one of the struggles she has had with advertising the event is letting people know the Walk of Life is not just for BSU students.

"It's important for all people to know this," she said. "I just want everyone to come."

Gough said she was shocked to see the support of 500-600 people at last year's Walk of Life.

"I'm hoping to be shocked again," she said. "It would be nice to fill the whole Terrace."

BRIEFING

The world is our campus

Reuters

Soldiers in the Afghan National Army practice their shooting at Kabul Military Academy. The army is trained by French soldiers from the International Security Assistance Force.

Pentagon seeks accelerated training of Afghan troops

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The United States would like to speed up training of the new Afghan National Army, Pentagon officials said Wednesday after pressing Afghan officials for help in equipping the new forces.

Now that the U.S. focus in Afghanistan has shifted from fighting the Taliban and al-Qaida to helping to rebuild the shattered country, the Pentagon also is looking at expanding its relief projects, Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Wolfowitz said.

"There's no way to go too fast," Wolfowitz said on a tour of a women's hospital being rebuilt with help from the U.S. Army. "The faster the better."

Wolfowitz said both the Afghan government and the United States want to train more soldiers more quickly. Currently, two battalions of about 600 soldiers each can take a 10-week basic training course at a time — one battalion trained by the United States, one by the French.

Wolfowitz said he pressed in meetings with President Hamid Karzai and Defense Minister Mohammed Fahim for the government to turn over some weapons stocks for the new national army, as opposed to allowing private militias keep most of them.

The Afghan government has military equipment seized from the Taliban as well as weapons from former Northern Alliance troops and some of the regional warlords who have pledged allegiance to the central government.

Lease extended 20 years

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — The Bureau of Land Management has proposed a plan that would allow the Mormon church to lease the Martin's Cove area for 20 years.

The agreement between the church and the BLM expired in 2001, said U.S. Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo. Under the new proposed agreement, the church would continue to manage the day-to-day operations and maintenance of facilities, he said Thursday.

A bill died in the Senate last year that would have forced the BLM to sell the 940 acres of historic property that comprise Martin's Cove to the church. Both Wyoming senators expressed their opposition to the sale, effectively blocking the bill.

Martin's Cove is considered hallowed ground to church members. Mormon handcart pioneers died there from cold and hunger during an 1856 blizzard.

ARRESTED FOR LOITERING

A protester is arrested outside the Federal Building during a demonstration against the threatened U.S.-led war against Iraq, Thursday in Los Angeles. Seventeen were arrested when they refused police orders to clear the sidewalk.

Mother arrested in killing

ST. LOUIS (AP) — When members of the Shunk family heard the shot blast, they thought for sure that Joe Shunk Jr. had finally killed his mother.

But it was Joe Jr. who lay dead — and his 66-year-old mother, Dixie, who allegedly pulled the trigger.

Today, Dixie Shunk is behind bars, charged with murder — and her family and friends are outraged. Dixie Shunk, they say, is a victim of her abusive, 41-year-old son, and they say she still has broken and bruised ribs.

They say Joe Jr. abused his father, his children, and his wife.

But law enforcement officials say that they are not aware of any past calls about Joe Jr.'s abusive behavior and that Dixie Shunk has not requested medical treatment in jail.

Earlier this week, about 40 of Dixie Shunk's supporters marched outside the courthouse in Pilot Knob, a town 85 miles southwest of St. Louis. Among them: her husband; two of Joe Jr.'s children; and Joe Jr.'s estranged wife, carrying a sign that read "Mother, Wife, Grandma. Friend — Not a Criminal."

PROTESTERS ANTI-U.S.

Warheads found in Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration responded cautiously Thursday to the discovery of chemical warheads in Iraq. But it insisted that Saddam Hussein is in violation of U.N. resolutions irrespective of whether the warheads turn out to be the "smoking gun" that has eluded U.N. inspectors thus far.

White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said the administration was assessing the discovery and would be deliberate about reacting to it. Another spokesman, Scott McClellan, said, "We look forward to receiving information from the inspectors."

The disclosure could change the dynamic of the debate over Iraq at the United Nations if the discovery represents clear evidence of an Iraqi violation.

Such a conclusion could strengthen the administration's stand as it seeks support from countries inflexibly opposed to military action against Iraq.

Tools left in patients

Associated Press

BOSTON — A study on medical mistakes found operating room teams around the country leave sponges, clamps and other tools inside about 1,500 patients every year, largely because of stress from emergencies or complications discovered during surgery.

Both the researchers and several other experts agree the number of such mistakes is small compared with the roughly 28 million operations a year in the United States. However, they say there is room to improve.

"It shows the system works. It just doesn't work perfectly," said Verna Gibbs, a surgeon at the University of California-San Francisco who has done separate research on medical mistakes.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, a research director of the patient interest lobby group Public Citizen, was more critical. He said the real number of lost instruments may be even higher, because hospitals are not required to report such mistakes to public agencies.

He also pointed to the study finding that surgical teams do not count equipment before and after the operation, in keeping with standard practice, in a third of cases where some equipment was left behind. It tended to happen during emergencies.

"It's not something that takes a lot of time," Wolfe said. "I don't think it's excusable."

The study was published Thursday in The New England Journal of Medicine.

Called to serve: New callings abound

By ELISA ANDERSON

Only at BYU do bishops call members to serve in such unique callings as chairman of the automotive board, study group coordinator, Relief Society sister and Bishop's Birthday board member.

With so many students in need of callings, some bishops are finding it difficult to supply each member with a calling.

And unique callings are emerging all over campus, and many students think the new callings are really useful.

"If you want to get something out of it, you will," said Michelle Packard, 21, a junior from Elizabeth, Colo., majoring in home family sciences. "No matter what calling it is — it's all about your attitude."

Packard was called to serve as study group coordinator during her freshman year. She was supposed to organize study groups for anxiety-stricken students in her ward.

"At first, I didn't take the calling seriously," Packard said. She thought the only reason for the position was just to have a calling in the ward, but she now thinks unique callings are good because they give everyone an opportunity to serve.

Colin Gibbons, 21, a sophomore from Orem, majoring in business, was called to serve as chairman of the automotive board.

The calling was made to serve the Relief Society sisters by teaching them basic automobile necessities.

Gibbons and his automotive board, which includes his roommate, Shelton Bischof, have the opportunity to serve many sisters in their ward by changing disk brakes and doing other miscellaneous jobs.

"Sometimes the creative callings are the coolest to get," said Bischof, 23, a junior from Cleveland, Ohio, majoring in business finances.

Bischof is considered the board's fluids specialist.

When Relief Society sisters, who are away from their homes, have minor problems with their cars, they often pay for them to be fixed. The automotive board, however, can fix the problem for free in five minutes, Gibbons said.

"The bishop must have seen the need for the calling," he said. Gibbons thinks the calling has been beneficial to his ward.

Bishop David Williams of the 215th Ward has called each one of the 200 ward members to serve in callings.

No one is asked to serve just for the purpose of giving everyone a calling.

Within his ward, members serve callings at the MTC, the temple and some on a unique Bishop's Birthday Bash Committee that was created to celebrate birthdays in the ward once a month.

The committee has been a great success at bringing the ward together, he said.

"All of these auxiliaries provide opportunities for the members to draw closer to their Savior and Heavenly Father," Williams said.

Gibbons said the new callings are necessary.

"Until all the needs in the ward have been met, there will be a continual need for new and old callings to be fulfilled," he said.

Some Y scholarships still available

By MARISSA WIDDISON

If you missed the Jan. 15 deadline for university spring/summer scholarships, don't despair! Many colleges and departments still have scholarships that have deadlines in the upcoming months.

"I didn't even know that colleges had separate scholarships for undergraduates," said Nancy Steele, 18, a freshman from Boise, Idaho. "I thought that you had to be a freshman to university scholarships, and that was

Department and college scholarships, like the students who receive them, come in different shapes and sizes. Some programs, like the Marriott School of Business and Management, make scholarship information easily accessible to students by including them on the department Web

According to the Business Administration Center, any student who is a business major can find out how to apply for the scholarships with a simple click of the mouse.

Other colleges, like nursing, require students to apply through a general university scholarship application process. After the university screens the applications, it sends the information on to the nursing program for review.

"We don't have time to process scholarships here," said Paula Smith, a secretary for nursing administration. "There are only two reviews over all the nursing scholarships. So we have the students go through the university."

Not all majors offer scholarships that students can apply for. Physical and mathematical sciences, for example, only offer a few scholarships to students who are nominated by their departments.

Though the process of applying for scholarships might seem intimidating, Rick Moors, a 22-year-old sophomore majoring in computer science, said the Internet simplified the process.

"I did the FAFSA online, and it was easier than I thought," Moors said. "There wasn't a stack of papers to make me nervous. Right after I was done I could check for outside scholarships online."

Although many Web sites are dedicated to helping college students find scholarships, the Scholarship Office encourages students to be careful when applying. Here are six warning signs they give that might indicate a phony scholarship:

- The scholarship is guaranteed or your money back.
- You can't get this information anywhere else.
- May I have your credit card and or bank account number to hold this scholarship?
- We'll do all the work.
- The scholarship will cost some money.
- You've been selected by a "National Foundation" to receive a scholarship, or "You're a finalist" in a contest you never entered.

Michelle Smith, 23, a BYU alumna from Orem, said that the bottom line about scholarships is they answer prayers.

"Three years ago, I panicked because I didn't know how I was going to survive financially," Smith said. "I wrote an essay and turned in an application and prayed really hard. And then I got this wonderful letter saying that I could have some money. Scholarships are wonderful things."

THEFT

A purple Trek model 800 bicycle was stolen from the bicycle rack outside the David O. McKay Building sometime between Dec. 20 and Jan. 5. The bicycle, valued at $350, was left unlocked on Dec. 20. The victim is a 34-year-old student.

A black Kenneth Cole coat was left on a chair in Room 107 of the Heber J. Grant Building on Jan. 7 between 11:58 a.m. and 1 p.m. The jacket, valued at $400, had a $300 Apple Ipod MP3 player in the pocket. The victim is a 30-year-old student.

On Jan. 9 between 7 and 8 a.m., a 20-year-old student reported her wedding ring had been taken from her locker in the women's swim team locker room located in the Richards Building. The three-stoned princess cut diamond, set in platinum and white gold wedding ring, was valued at $2,650. The locker room was locked. Entrance requires an electronic code.

Jan. 11 between 8-10 a.m. A student ID card was reported missing from the Smith Fieldhouse. The victim said he put his ID card along the weight room wall with other ID cards.

FIRE

A fire broke out in Room C130 of the Benson Building at 4:38 p.m. on Jan. 9. The building was evacuated after a student, working in a lab, started a small fire in a hooded exhaust area. There was minimal damage and the perpetrator was identified. Charges are pending for reckless burning.

OTHER

An ID card was reported missing from the weight room of the Smith Fieldhouse on Jan. 13 at 5:43 p.m. Later that evening the victim received an e-mail indicating the sender had picked up the wrong ID card.

Student makes the right moves, becomes contestant on game show

By MARIE DAVIES

Bob Barker's face? Smooth like a baby's butt.

At least that's how recent "Price is Right" contestant Erin Hall described it.

"You can tell he's kinda had maybe a little tuck or two," said Hall, a sophomore from Glendale, Ariz., majoring in communications. "His skin is so soft."

When Hall attended a taping of the popular game show in December, she said she knew the chances of getting on stage were unlikely. However, she still had hope ... and a plan.

"The night before, we had gone to this Hollywood parade and I met this guy there," she said. "He actually used to be on the MTV show 'Undressed' and I told him, 'I'm gonna go on the 'Price is Right' tomorrow.'"

"And he's like, 'OK, this is what you need to do.' He gave me the skinny. Like, they're gonna interview you and you need to be spunky; you need to be really upbeat. Not spazzy or anything. And mention that you're a college student and that you're a waitress so they'll have sympathy on you," she said.

In addition, Hall made a T-shirt. The shirt read: "I've waited 10 years to come on down," on the front. The back read: "I want to be a Barker beauty."

She said she thought it was cute. Apparently, so did the CBS guys who choose which names are called.

Erin Hall, a recent "Price is Right" participant, was able to meet Bob Barker in person and also spin for a chance to win her dream car.

all the way up there and I kissed Bob on the cheek," Hall said of the moment Rod Roddy called her name and told her to "come on down."

On her first try, Hall bid "outrageously high" on a lawnmower. But when her turn came around again, she bid low, won a $1,300 desk and ran up onto the stage, which she described as "eensy eensy weensy."

The prize she played for? A big, black truck.

"My whole life I've wanted a big black truck," Hall said. "I told everybody, 'I'm gonna go on the 'Price is Right' and I'm gonna win a truck.' And so the doors opened, and it was a black Dodge Ram. I was twirlin' and screamin', and I'm so scared to see it on TV because I know I was just such a nerd."

Under the glaring stage lights she played the game "One Away." When she tried to look to the audience for advice, she said she couldn't see or hear anything because everyone was screaming and waving.

Later, when it was her turn to spin the big wheel, Hall was ready. Barker warned her that it was heavy and said that if she couldn't get it all the way around he could help her. When she assured him she was up to the challenge, he laughed at her.

"I spun it, and I spun the heck out of it. It was great," Hall said.

But wait, did Hall win the truck? Did she win big money on the wheel? Did she go to the final bidding showdown? Find out yourself. The show airs today on CBS at 9 a.m.

Close encounters of the eternal kind

By BRITT BALKCOM

For those who meet their future mate at BYU, the first encounter may come in a way that is both surprising and unanticipated.

Justin Jory, 25, a senior from Mountlake Terrace, Wash., majoring in philosophy, unexpectedly met his spouse after a spring football workout.

A woman seated on the grass outside the Smith Fieldhouse called out to Jory, pointing out that he looked tired.

Jory said he found himself thinking, "this girl looks good."

After a lengthy phone call and a first date, the couple began discussing marriage plans.

Jeremy Hodgkins, 27, a former BYU student, met his wife on the Internet.

After a chance meeting in a chat room, Hodgkins met Laura and the two became friends.

After several chat sessions Hodgkins called Laura and Students Justin and Andrea Jory are just one pair that have met each other in strange settings.

soon after made arrangements to fly out to Ohio where Laura lived.

"About four days after I met her in person, I proposed," Hodgkins said.

Other chance meetings have not produced such quick courtships.

Rebekah South, 23, a senior majoring in marriage, family and human development from Philadelphia, Pa., met her band, Brian, on a blind date during her freshman year.

Both were freshmen, and an was mission-bound. She out to his farewell in another state and was there to welcome him upon his return. After short post-mission break, Rebekah and Brian eventually got back together — this time good.

Students seek alternatives to library setting

Borders is place to retreat for artistic outlet

By BRITTANY WISCOMBE

No food, no talking and no music. The library on campus provides a quiet study environment for many students. Yet, others discreetly hide cheese snacks in their backpacks, whisper to their neighbors and listen to headphones.

Some study better in a more relaxed and casual environment. These students can be found at community locations such as Borders in the Provo Riverwoods.

"The library doesn't have access to new releases," said Othman Jundi, majoring in information technology. "At places like Borders, I can talk with my friends, read magazines and listen to some live background music while studying."

Borders has reached out to the community with the help of the Timpanogos Singer Songwriter Alliance. Artists affiliated with this Utah nonprofit organization perform weekly in the study lounge of the store.

A variety of music genres can be found while studying. Borders offers live jazz Wednesday nights and local bands on Friday and Saturday nights.

Paul Jacobsen, an artist under TSSA, spoke of the consistency and quality that the program provides for the community.

"TSSA has a fantastic network of connections and a great reputation," Jacobsen said. "When I play at places like Borders, I have a chance to get my music out to somebody who I'd never reach otherwise."

Yet, music is not the only factor some students look for in a study environment. It seems many starving students are apt to study if there is food involved.

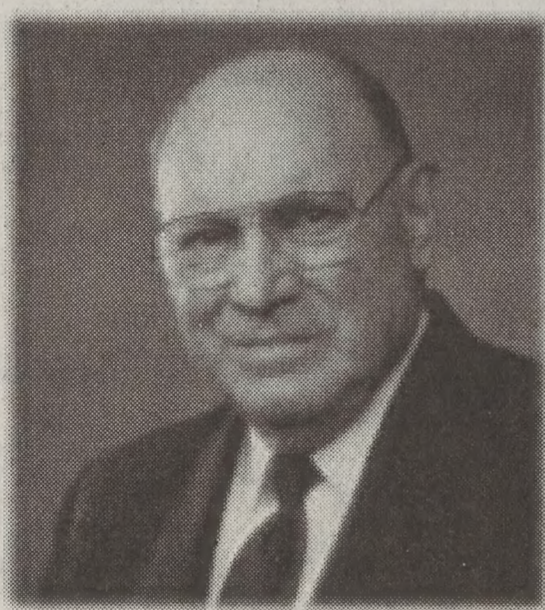

"You wouldn't believe how much hot chocolate we go through," said Susana Arnold café supervisor at Borders. "We purposely cultivate a free-spirited study environment."

Arnold said Borders staff members have weekly brainstorming meetings to create a more casual, welcoming environment.

"Libraries can have a tense feeling," Arnold said. "There is no stigma here for students to stay quiet."

Elder Joseph B. Wirthlin

Member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles

Elder Joseph B. Wirthlin was ordained an Apostle in October 1986. He was sustained as an Assistant to the Twelve in 1975, serving in that capacity until he was called to the First Quorum of the Seventy the following year. He was set apart as one of the Presidency of the Seventy in 1986, just before his current calling.

A Salt Lake City native, Elder Wirthlin was an Eagle Scout and active in high school athletics. He also played college football before graduating in business administration from the University of Utah. Before his call as a General Authority, he was a prominent Salt Lake business leader and president of a Utah trade association.

Elder Wirthlin served a mission to Germany, Austria, and Switzerland.

He gave additional service in many ward and stake leadership positions before his 1971 call to be first counselor in the Sunday School general presidency.

As an Apostle, Elder Wirthlin has provided leadership in a number of positions. He is currently serving as chairman of the Boundary and Leadership Change Committee; a member of the Area Committee, Correlation Executive Committee, and Strengthening Church Members Committee; board member of Deseret Management Corporation; and First Contact of the Quorum of the Twelve for three areas in North America.

He is married to Elisa Young Rogers. They are parents of eight children and have 46 grandchildren and 23 great grandchildren.

Cougars make presence known in Mountain West

Strong showing on Defense gives women
Big win over CSU

HILLARY WALLACE

Defense in the first half a vital role for the BYU men's basketball team Thursday as the Cougars bounced past Colorado State in a 71-56 win.
The first half was one of the defensive efforts we've had along time," coach Jeff Judkins said. "I thought everyone in the first half ready to sion," Colorado State coach Chris Denker said. "But we didn't score for the next 21 possessions."

Shooting for BYU also proved to be an advantage as the team shot 42 percent from behind the arc and 47 percent from the field.
Senior guard Erin Thorn contributed four three-pointers and senior forward Jennifer Leitner hit 2-of-3.

Denker said he was disappointed in Colorado State's play because the Cougars were able to do whatever they wanted to, when they wanted to, and they did it.

Judkins said BYU was able to take Colorado State out of its best play by preparing in practice for the Rams' offensive attack. The Cougars also took Judkins' challenge to keep Colorado State's outside shooters from getting open looks.

"We did a good job of pressuring their shooters and denying the reversal pass in their offense," Judkins said.

So with their offense struggling, the Rams had to rely on

Ashley Augspurger, Mountain West Player of the Week. But as she developed foul trouble early in the game, the Cougars took advantage and attacked Colorado State's defense.

Judkins said BYU forward
Jennifer Leitner played tough defense against Augspurger, who only had 10 points in this first conference match-up.

"I would credit BYU's defense," Denker said. "We were so poor. Sometimes they didn't have to play defense."

Defensive rebounds were another key to BYU's win as Colorado missed several free throws in the first half. The Cougars out-rebounded the Rams, 41-33.

Since BYU's win against top-ranked Texas in non-conference play, Judkins said the defensive effort against Colorado State was the best he has seen from the team.

"I think we can take this and learn from it," Thorn said as BYU now looks for another conference win against Wyoming this Saturday.

Men keep streak alive against UNLV

By NIC GOODFELLOW

With a 43-game winning streak on the line, the Cougars showed no mercy as they dismantled the UNLV Runnin' Rebels in front of one of the largest crowds of the year Thursday night in the Marriott Center.

The Cougars led early and never looked back as they beat the Rebels 85-77, extending their nation-leading home winning streak to 44 in front of a crowd of nearly 18,000.

"We spent the last ten days trying to be a more efficient team offensively," head coach Steve Cleveland said. "We took care of the ball. We were unselfish, and we had as good a execution offensively as we had all year."

BYU looked sluggish early, beginning the game with two quick misses and giving up four quick points to UNLV's two big scorers, Dalron Johnson and Marcus Banks.

But Terry Nashif and Kevin Woodberry quickly took Marcus Banks out of rhythm, and the hot shooting from Saturday's win over Idaho State had apparently not yet worn off as the Cougars reeled off nine straight points on three's by Travis Hansen and Mark Bigelow.

Hansen and Bigelow play better when they score early and it showed again tonight.

"I was just open, so I shot it," junior guard Travis Hansen said.
"I just keep playing hard. I have a lot of confidence in myself."

Volleyball faces tough road trip

STEPHEN VINCENT

The BYU men's volleyball team begins a daunting journey through the grueling Mountain West Sports schedule by playing four matches in five nights this weekend.

The No. 5 Cougars (1-1) are hoping to rebound from Saturday's disappointing loss to Red Deer when they face No. 12 Stanford (3-2-2) today and Saturday.
They will then travel to Stockton, Calif., to face No. 15 Pacific (1-3)
on Sunday and Tuesday.

The Cougars had better get ready to play ranked teams.
Six of the 12 MPSF teams are ranked in the first American Volleyball Coaches Association Top 10, which was released Tuesday. MPSF squads own the top three spots and eight slots overall in the Top 10.

For the Cougars, that means that although this week's opponents are both in the Top 15, they may be the easiest competition the Cougars face for a while.

Not that "easy" is a word to be associated with Stanford or Pacific.

Stanford beat BYU in the 2002 season opener, but the Cougars were able to reverse roles in April, ending Stanford's season.

So has Stanford spent the offseason waiting for its chance to avenge that loss?

"That was a great match played a long time ago," Stanford coach Don Shaw said. "This is a new year."

Shaw said he has not had the chance to see BYU on tape, so his team will just focus this week on getting better.

Big challenge for BYU gymnasts in opener

STACIE SEARLE

The gymnastics team faces a tough opener today in Salt Lake City.

This is kind of throwing the wolves right off the team," said Brad Cattermole, head coach. "Utah always has a great crowd. It's always a fun affair, and most of the kids love that stuff."

Last year, BYU lost to Utah at the Huntsman Center 198-425.
According to Cattermole, Utah is a tough meet. Three athletes were hurt, and the team had a low bar score.

Today, coaches from both teams passed their excitement for the meet. They also emphasized that the traditional football and basketball rivalry between BYU-Utah are not as strong in gymnastics. Cattermole said it is because the goal is to score well, not necessarily to win.

"We want to take advantage of the atmosphere and pull off a good score to get seeded in regionals," Cattermole said.

Only the top three teams in each region will make it to regionals. It all depends on a team's scores, not the number of wins it has.

"We have a great rivalry, and there's a lot of competition," said Greg Marsden, Utah's head coach. "It's a tough one that typically comes down to the last event. The girls are excited, and no one was allowed to wear blue this week to practice."

Presumed Facts

8. Those with money had plates made of pewter. Food with a high acid content caused some of the lead to leach onto the food, causing lead poisoning and death. This happened most often with tomatoes, so for the next 400 years or so, tomatoes were considered poisonous.

BYU's Travis Hansen attempts an off-balance shot against UNLV Thursday. The Cougars got an important win in their first conference game, 85-77, and extended their home win streak to 44 games.

MEN

Win against UNLV a promising start

BYU controlled the first half from that point on by throwing the ball inside to Rafael Araujo for some easy buckets, and that opened up the perimeter for the shooters.

Defensively they were able to keep UNLV's leading scorer, Marcus Banks, to just four points on 2-of-6 shooting in the first half.

"The start of the game was run at BYU's pace," UNLV head coach Charlie Spoonhour said. "Any time you dig yourselves into a 10-point hole on the road, it's tough to come back from."

The Cougars as a team shot 46 percent from the field and a scorching 62 percent from the three point arc, led by Mark Bigelow's 16 points on 4-of-6 shooting as the Cougars took a 10-point lead into the locker room.

The beginning of the half was no different as the Cougars came out on fire, outscoring the Rebels 10-5 in the first three minutes as Travis Hansen scored seven of the Cougars' first 10 points and the Cougars increased their lead to 15 at 53-38.

The Runnin' Rebels were not about to give up as they slowly picked away at BYU's defense and brought the game to within five with four minutes to go. But BYU's defense has been its strongest asset all year and it showed as the team held the Rebels to only eight points in the final four minutes of the game.

Rafael Araujo continues to be the most improved player on the team as he was a dominant force inside both offensively and sively. "The first half I was Araujo said. "But in the half I needed to go focused."

He was more focused tune of 22 points rebounds.

"He is always intense Hansen said of Araujo. the game; he loves to work

The win was even sw Araujo, who made the de come to BYU only after h down UNLV's offer.

"I have respect for guys play," Araujo said. "But I made the right de come here."

With the win, BYU go on the season and 8-0 at Next game for the Cou Monday night when they Aztecs of San Diego State time is 7 p.m.
